WIRELESS STATION FOR ELY, NEVADA

While in Ely last week, Victor Barndt, president of the Railroad Valley Saline company, stated that his people were very anxious to erect a wireless station at the scene of their operations in Railroad valley, and would do so if a connecting station could be established in Ely. The company had under consideration the erection of a telephone line, but the expense would be several thousand dollars and a wireless would answer their purpose just as well, if connections could be established.

There are at present two wireless stations at Tonopah and messages from stations along the Pacific coast are picked up without any trouble.

Considerable interest has been aroused in Ely over the possibilities of the situation and there is little doubt that sufficient funds could be raised without much trouble for the erection of a tower and the installation of the necessary apparatus but there would be considerable expense involved in keeping up the station after it was once established and it is a little hard to see how it could be made a direct advantage and commercial success, although the indirect advantages derived might be large.

It has been suggested that the wireless might be used to advantage by the forest service in communicating with rangers at distant stations and Acting Supervisor Diefenbach has offered to write to division headquarters at Ogden to see if the government regulations provide for any experiments along these lines.

A station on Calumet peak, north of town, would no doubt pick up messages from anywhere in the state, but its erection would involve the building of a power line to the top of the peak to supply the necessary electricity for the instruments and the inaccessibility of the location is also a serious objection. The hill to the south of town along which the water company's ditch runs, has also been suggested and would no doubt be a suitable location with a tower of considerable height.

The possibilities of the proposition is most interesting and such a station would no doubt be of considerable commercial benefit to the town, indirectly if not directly.

EVERYBODY'S FRIEND

The old family doctor, of whom so few are now seen in this age of "specialists" was the valued friend and adviser of his patients. They depended on him to keep them in health, and cheer them with his counsel. He taught them the wisdom of preventing illness by watching closely after the health of the family.

Mrs. S. H. DuBols writes from her home at Hempstead, L. I.: "Vinol is an old friend of our family. We have used it for years whenever any of us need a tonic, on account of being in a rundown state of health, and it always gives perfect satisfaction. We have used nine bottles this winter."

There are thousands of families who could and do say the same thing. Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil, has proved its value by bringing back rugged health and strength to vast numbers of weak, rundown men, women and children. That is why we sell so much and guarantee it to give satisfaction. If it disappoints you, you can have your money back at once. Miners' Drug Store, Inc., Tonopah, Nevada.

At the Nevada Theater
This Monday Evening,

Scene from the "White Sister."

All women enjoy a good love story in which the fate of the lovers hang in the balance and is spiced with a little danger—that is one of the greatest reasons for the remarkable success of "The White Sister," which is billed for tonight at the Nevada theater with the magnetic American beauty, Jeanne Fowler, in the stellar role and a superior cast of supporting players. "The White Sister" was dramatized from Marion Crawford's latest novel of the same name and the action of the play occurs in Sunny Italy, the home of romance, love, poetry and music. It is an intensely human story in a religious setting and that is why it is so strongly indorsed by the church, although in its development it is amusement and entertainment of the purest quality. It is handled in an uplifting manner and carries a convincing lesson. The role of the Nun (The White Sister) makes exacting demands upon the emotional powers of the actress, and it is her powerful interpretation of the role and her striking appearance in the character that has earned for Jeanne Fowler the reputation of being America's most beautiful emotional actress. Nearly every character in the play is a star part and requires a company of unusual quality to do it justice. The stage pictures are realistic and handsome, while the interpolated music which permeates the play is sweet and soothing. "The White Sister" will probably crowd the theater, and undoubtedly be one of the most genuine treats of the season.

ABE ATTELL LOSES FIGHT TO MURPHY IN 20 ROUNDS

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—Abe Attell of San Francisco, former featherweight champion of the world, went down to defeat before the greater weight of "Harlem Tommy" Murphy Saturday afternoon before a killing crowd at James C. Froth's Colma arena. The fight was one of the fastest and bloodiest ever seen between good fighters here. Using his extra 11 pounds of weight to advantage all the time, Murphy wore Attell down and the 20th session found Abe desperately tired and covered with blood to the waist line, pounding away at Murphy's stomach, while the New York boy tried in vain to put enough steam behind his punches to Abe's unprotected jaw to stretch him on the canvas. Referee Jack Welch immediately lifted Murphy's arm. Attell, swaying on his feet, his left eye closed, and bleeding at the nose and mouth was led to his corner. Murphy suffered from Attell's jabs, and spat blood frequently from his cut lips throughout the fight.

"Too much weight," said Ad Wolgast, who was a ringside spectator. "It was the hardest fight I ever saw, and I didn't think Abe could stand the punching."

Attell, while his seconds worked over his closing eyes and bleeding lips in his dressing room after the fight could only say: "No statement, no statement," to the newspaper men. Murphy refused to allow them in his room.

The fight started at a terrific gait, Attell jabbing to the jaw through Murphy's guard and landing resounding punches to his midsection. Attell took the round, but went to his corner with a bloody nose.

Murphy rushed across the ring at the going, and put Attell against the ropes in his own corner. He beat down Abe's guard and rained rights and lefts on his unprotected face and jaw. The crowd, howling for a knock out, climbed on the seats and urged Murphy on. Attell suddenly shook his head, jumped aside, shook Murphy with a left to the wind, and put him against the ropes in the same corner with a shower of sturdy punches which Murphy could neither dodge nor block.

From then on to the 20th session, when Attell had desperate work to avoid a knockout, the crowd was with Attell almost to a man.

Attell showed few flashes of his old-time style of hitting and getting away, but was cheered to the echo whenever he quit swapping punches and set to work to outbox Murphy. The ninth brought crowd to its feet as Attell, dancing around Murphy, pumped in blow after blow to the stomach, right and left, while Murphy fanned the air.

Attell was far in the lead at the tenth round, although his bulkier opponent was never more than momentarily in distress. Both fighters rested from the tugging pace for four or five rounds, and Attell took the 16th and held the 17th even with terrific body blows, although the blood flowed from his nose in a stream. From then on Murphy's super-strength kept Attell on the defensive.

Murphy gained no great credit by his victory in the opinion of many ringside critics, who were disappointed at his failure to display an effective punch when such a blow meant a knockout.
